I declare that I am (please mark one):

A single-parent household.

If I declare I am a single parent but the information I have submitted to document the number of children living with me (example: birth certificates) lists a second parent, I must submit proof that the other parent of my child(ren) is not living with me by providing any one of the following documents, as applicable:

- Records of divorce or legal separation
- Court-ordered child custody arrangements
- Evidence that I am receiving, have filed for, or have declined child support with the appropriate local agency
- Rental receipts or agreements, contracts, utility bills, or other documents for my residence indicating that I am the responsible party
- Any other documentation, excluding a self-declaration, to confirm the absence of the second parent in the family.
- If the second parent has recently left the family, I may be allowed to self-declare, under penalty of perjury, explaining the absence of the second parent from the family. I understand that this can only be accepted for a maximum of 6 (six) months at which time, I must submit acceptable documentation.

Please note: Failure to submit adequate proof that the second parent is not in the home will result in the termination or non-approval of child care services.

A two-parent household. Second parent's name: _____.
